

Dr. Berthold Kuhn is a political scientist and international cooperation advisor specializing in sustainable development. He serves as an Adjunct Professor (Privatdozent) at the Otto-Suhr-Institute of Political Science, Freie Universität Berlin, and works with the European Commission, German development cooperation, international consulting firms, and think tanks.

Previously, Dr. Kuhn held faculty positions at Leiden University, Tsinghua University, and Xiamen University. His research examines the nexus of sustainable development, climate and environmental policy, and governance of social welfare and cultural heritage from a comparative perspective.

Drawing on extensive field experience, he has advised and evaluated EU- and German-funded projects across Asia and Africa, including China, India, Bangladesh, Pakistan, Nepal, Vietnam, the Philippines, Cambodia, South Africa, DR Congo, Cameroon, Ethiopia, Senegal, Kenya, Zimbabwe, and Benin. Currently based in Xiamen, Dr. Kuhn collaborates closely with universities in China and Europe, bridging research and practice on global sustainability transitions. His work has been featured in leading academic journals such as the Chinese Journal of Political Sciences. Website: www.innovateCo.de; www.fu-berlin.de
